

British Sign Language (BSL) Introduction to Bilingualism Matters and the June 2020 Webinar

Transcript of YouTube video

Bilingualism Matters is a research and information centre founded by Professor Antonella Sorace in 2008 at the University of Edinburgh. Researchers affiliated with the Centre study bilingualism and language learning, and communicate their knowledge to enable people to make informed decisions based on scientific evidence. Bilingualism Matters aims to make a real change in society through dialogue between researchers and the community, working in partnership with parents, teachers, health professionals, policy makers and employers to help create impact in people's daily lives.

The Bilingualism Matters Edinburgh Webinar was held on 5th June 2020 and featured two talks by two experts on bilingualism: "Languages in lockdown and beyond" by Prof Antonella Sorace and "How to interpret bilingualism studies" - Dr Thomas Bak. The video of these talks is now available with BSL translation.
